

When the zombie apocalypse finally happens, we'll all be sitting around snarking on the internet:

MOOD: 😊 braaaaaaiiiiiinnnnnnnnnnnnssssssssss

MUSIC: Jonathan Coulton - Re: Your Brains

Metairie man says stranger chewed, swallowed after taking bite out of his arm (https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//www.nola.com/news/index.ssf/2009/04/metairie_man_says_stranger_che.html)

Bonnie Lancellotti also has concerns about the suspect, who apparently had been treated at East Jefferson General Hospital earlier in the day for a finger injury. Vargas was released 45 minutes before the attack, according to the incident report.

Bonnie Lancellotti wondered whether hospital staff noticed anything amiss while treating Vargas. "This person's clearly lost his sense," she said. "I mean, what else can you say, eating people's skin?"

...and apparently patient zero is still out there.

Gonna be a big lurch (<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//www.renaessance.com/lurchindex.html>)_next year.

This looks like a good idea.

Year after that, maybe. I mean, Metairie. Zombies walk awfully slowly.

(Hey! This is the real reason the U.S. never invested in high-speed rail!)

They just cling to the freight trains. Can't run to catch the Acela. They drop bits.

You never know with New Orleans. Lot of tradition in those parts. But then there's the tourists, so hey.

I HATE fast zombies. They aren't zombies. Ghouls, maybe. Not zed-heads.
Brrr!
